Cochran's Stone Masonry and Twin Oaks Timberframes Merge

New Company is called Cochran's Stone Masonry and Timberframing

Lincoln, VA, August 11, 2008—Cochran's Stone Masonry and Twin Oaks Timberframes have merged to form Cochran's Stone Masonry and Timberframing. The combined company specializes in the restoration and stabilization of historic properties, period inspired new construction, hand hewing, lime mortar and lime wash, relocation of historic structures, and construction using historically correct methods and materials. Services are available for selected projects nationwide.

Allen Cochran, founder and owner of Cochran's Stone Masonry and Timberframing, is a leader in the lime mortar renaissance and timberframing said, "It just made sense to combine the two companies since we are focused on the same target—the use of historically correct craftsman techniques and materials." Cochran has been in the business of stabilization and restoration of historic properties for over 20 years. Under his leadership, the company has relocated many historic structures by documenting the building, photographing and cataloguing the components, disassembling it and relocating the structure to a new site.

Cochran's Stone Masonry and Timberframing is located in historic Lincoln, Virginia, and has completed projects all over the United States. Projects include Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, Montpelier, and countless historic structures in many locations. Lime putty is manufactured onsite and is available for distribution. Salvaged logs and timbers to repair and replace damaged timber frames are also available and if new wood is needed, can be milled to exact specifications. The company also builds dove tail doors and mantels for the use in construction and restoration projects.
